Vancouver has Cosmos worried

Compiled from news services

VANCOUVER, B.C. — The New York Cosmos, pushed to the limit last week by the Tulsa Roughnecks, are expecting an even tougher time tonight from the Vancouver Whitecaps at Empire Stadium.

"Vancouver tries to destroy you," noted the Cosmos' star midfielder, Franz Beckenbauer. "The way they play the game sometimes cheats the fans from seeing good soccer. But they do have some very good players — it's a much better team than Tulsa."

Tulsa beat the Cosmos, 3-0, in the first game of their two-game series, but the defending champions rebounded with a 3-0 victory of their own and then a 3-1 advantage in the mini-game to advance to meet Vancouver tonight in the North American Soccer League semifinals.

The series moves to Giants Stadium Saturday afternoon, with the winner taking on the American Conference champion in the September 8 Soccer Bowl.

The Whitecaps beat the Cosmos twice this season, something not lost on the New York left wing, Dennis Tueart.

"I'd compare the Whitecaps to a top team in the English First Division," Tueart said. "No superstars, but good team play. We'll have the same problems with them that every English-style team gives us on the road, only more of them."

VANCOUVER, after dropping a 3-2 game to Los Angeles in its quarter-final series, needed a pair of 1-0 victories to qualify for the semifinals.

The Cosmos will be forced to play without their Dutch stars, Johan Neeskens and Wim Rijsbergen, but both are expected back for Saturday.

The loss of Neeskens, the workaholic midfielder, is especially damaging.

"Neeskens is very important to us," said Professor Julio Mazzei, the team's technical director. "What he brought to this team is heart, or what Americans call guts."

Neeskens suffered a slight shoulder separation, a sprained wrist and a possible broken thumb in the first Tulsa game and then pulled a groin muscle in the second game.

"He plays in pain and he plays well," Mazzei said, "like the time he had four stitches in his head and came back to finish the game. Johan is fantastic. He has so much heart that if I asked him if he could play tomorrow, he'd say yes. But the doctors say no."

Rijsbergen has a severely twisted ankle.

The loser of tonight's first game will be forced to win the regular game and the 30-minute mini-game Saturday to make the Soccer Bowl.

MEANWHILE, Whitecaps fever, understandably welcomed by club officials, isn't going over well with some fans — those who couldn't get tickets.

Newspaper and radio stations reported being flooded with calls from irate fans, unhappy at the team's method of allocating tickets.

Josh Keller, Whitecaps' director of public relations, said it was simply a case of demand exceeding the supply of 20,000 tickets. The remaining 12,000 tickets in the 32,000-seat stadium are sold to season-ticket holders on a first-served basis.

Keller said the Whitecaps were caught off guard by the unprecedented demand which had ticket hopefuls lining up at 5 a.m. Monday in front of the Whitecaps' downtown office. Scalpers did a brisk business.

For the lucky 32,000, however, the game itself will be the only thing that matters.

Carl Valentine and Trevor Why-mark, Whitecaps forwards, both suffering minor groin problems, are expected to be ready for the contest along with Jon Samuels, who missed the past few games because of injury.

Haney takes P.N.G.A. title

RICHLAND — (AP) — Fred Haney of Portland held off a challenge from Mike Davis of Olympia yesterday to win the Pacific Northwest Professional Golf Association championship.

Haney, the first-round leader, shot a 1-under-par 71 yesterday. The Waverly Country Club professional wound up at 5-under-par 139 through 36 holes on the Meadow Springs Country Club course.

Davis, the defending champion, a fired 72 yesterday to wind up four shots off the pace at 143. Dave Gibson of Seattle finished third at 145 but was never a serious threat to overtake Haney.

Rick Acton of Kirkland was fourth at 147.

Haney won $925, Davis $825, Gibson $725, and Acton $625.

Haney clinched the championship when Davis hit the water en route to a double-bogey six on the 18th hole.
